Comrades:—The duty of today is of impressive significance. We meet to honor our dead and to deepen our reverence for their worth: to strengthen among ourselves the bond of fraternity by recalling the memory of experiences common to us all; to encourage a more generous charity for our comrades who are sick or in distress, and for the destitute wards of the Grand Army, to renew our pledge of loyalty to our country and our fiag, and to emphasize in the minds and hearts of all who may unite with us the privi-

The Grand Army had a particularly fine day for their Memorial day exercises on Monday, quite in contrast to last year, and the result was a large attendance of veterans in the parade, those marching numbering forty-four, while along the line of march and at the exercises there were many hundreds of people. Throughout the city there was a conspicuous display of flags and at the cemeteries much work had been done decorating the graves. The parade started promotly at 2 celock under the guidance of Marshal James Harvey and was reviewed at the foot of Cliff street by the city and town officials in carriages, who brought up the rear, the procession having formed in front of the Buckingham Memorial In the following order:
